GED makes some changes...including its name

Announcing the new

Indiana High School Equivalency Diploma

High School Equivalency is changing in Indiana. Please help us spread the word.

Beginning in January of 2014, the Indiana High School Equivalency Diploma will be based on the completion of a comprehensive test developed by CTB/McGraw-Hill instead of the GED® tests from GED Testing Service.

What will be the SAME?

- The credential granted will still be the Indiana High School Equivalency Diploma.
- The test will still assess math, reading, writing, science and social studies.
- The test will still take about 7 hours.
- Test-takers still need to demonstrate proficiency in subject matter tested at the level of typical high school seniors in the nation in order to pass.

What will be DIFFERENT?

- The name of the test will be the Indiana High School Equivalency test.
- Transcripts will show Indiana High School Equivalency test scores.
- Standard scores on the transcript will be shown on a different scale.
- The test will be a better indicator of a student's readiness for college or career.
- The rigor of the test will gradually align to the College and Career Readiness Standards for Adult Education over the next three years, which will help students and educators stay focused on fundamentals while also gradually deepening the level of knowledge required.

Background:

It is a new world in high school equivalency. This is the first time more than one high school equivalency test has been available to states. High school equivalency has always been based on state requirements, but most people have referred to "GED®" as the generic title. Now many states, including Indiana, have selected a new high school equivalency test.

How you can help:

- An applicant with a passing score on the new Indiana High School Equivalency Diploma test is a qualified high school equivalency graduate.
- If it is possible, please change "GED" on your application forms to "High School Equivalency Diploma." If forms can't be changed at this time, please be sure that admissions staff and Human Resource officials understand that those who pass the Indiana High School Equivalency test have a legitimate high school equivalency credential.
- If you have questions, contact the Department of Workforce Development at adulted@dwd.in.gov or 317-233-6480.

Careers in Hospitality, Entertainment, Amusement, Recreation and Tourism

The Hospitality, Entertainment, Amusement, Recreation, and Tourism (HEART) industry cluster is one of the most unique sectors in Northwest Indiana; HEART includes the agriculture industry, the wholesale trade industry, the retail trade industry, the arts industry, and the accommodation industry. Nearly 137,000 people are employed in this cluster, earning an average of $26,052 per job across a diverse array of occupations. While the average pay is low relative to the industries previously covered, these jobs are valuable to the economy for several reasons:

- Often, jobs in this industry are a person's first work experience. There are nearly 7,000 people aged 14 to 18 years employed in HEART.
- Due to the nature of the HEART, many occupations are part-time positions; this allows for supplemental income opportunities. This is especially useful for college students whose age group (19 to 24) comprises 17 percent of the industry's workers.
- At the entry level, there is a low education barrier. Many basic jobs require a high school diploma (or less) and rely more on the worker's customer service orientation. Management positions and specialized careers, such as a pharmacist, often require a postsecondary credential.

- HEART jobs supply workers with important work readiness skills that are essential in a competitive job market.

This is a healthy industry--HEART jobs are expected to grow 9.3 percent over the next ten years, adding 1,200 jobs per year on average. Much of this growth can be attributed to increased demand across the whole age spectrum – younger folks are getting jobs and contributing to the economy, while baby boomers have more leisure time to consume the goods and services of the HEART industry.

Keeping in line with the trend set forth by Advanced Manufacturing and Transportation, Distribution, and Logistics (TDL), technology is changing the face of HEART occupations. For example, in restaurants, wait staff are adopting the use of tablets to place customers' orders. In retail, point-of-sale registers are becoming more technologically advanced as the interface resembles (or may actually be) a touch screen smart phone rather than a computer. The job market is to the point where, if you lack modern technology skills, you are essentially unemployable in any major industry clusters, HEART included.

According to Harry Dahlstrom from Dahlstrom+Company, there are

10 rules of thumb for job hunters

- 80 percent of all job openings are not advertised.
- The best way to get a job is to ask family and friends if they could help you get a job where they work.
- The next best way to get a job is to apply through the "employment" page of a company's own web site.
- 70 percent of job hunters use both newspapers and the internet to look for employment.
- Every year, about 12 million people find work through employment agencies.
- Mail a letter and your resume to 100 employers asking for a job interview and you could expect three interviews.
- Employers interview four people for every hire they make.
- Showing up 5-15 minutes late for a job interview will disqualify you 60 percent of the time.
- The first question asked during an interview is usually, "Can you tell me a little about yourself?"
- 80 percent of employers regularly conduct reference checks.

Summer jobs for youth

Whether it's their first job or a summer job, having an opportunity to make their own money, provides teens with a feeling of responsibility and a sense of accomplishment! For many teens, it's a rite of passage, a signal that they are on their way to adulthood. That first job can be a method for earning money to pay for activities, interests, or savings for post-secondary schooling.

Teens need to understand the importance of putting on their polite and eager faces while learning about the realities of pounding the pavement. They must convince an employer that they are responsible and reliable, two traits that many would-be employers worry about when they consider hiring a teen. Working to get someone to hire them, especially if it's their first job, can be intimidating and will be discouraging at times. That's when lessons learned from their parents, grandparents, and teachers, comes into play. Chin-up and if at first you don't succeed try, try again!

The summer job can provide a teen the opportunity to gain hands-on experience, learn important life and work skills that include communication, time management, and teamwork--three soft skills that will serve them through a life time!

Top summer jobs for teens

Investopedia.com Contributing Writer, Janet Fowler provided the list of 10 great summer jobs for teens.

CAMP COUNSELOR

Are you interested in leadership? For teens that are natural leaders or educators, a summer job as a camp counselor is an ideal pick. This job will allow older teens to spend time outdoors, mentor younger kids and help them to develop new skills. A great perk of this job, aside from being paid to spend plenty of time outdoors, is that you will be developing loads of transferable skills that will be useful throughout life, such as leadership abilities, communication and conflict resolution skills. This job also requires teens to live away from home, which can help them to become more independent as they transition into adulthood.

INTERNSHIPS

This presents an ideal option for teens that are already on course toward a particular career. This will assist with gaining real industry experience that'll look great on a resume. Even though many of these types of positions are unpaid, the experience that can be gained from completing an internship could be priceless when you consider the professional experience that can be gained. Teens can locate internship opportunities through their high school guidance counselors, or by being bold and approaching their target companies directly.

GOLF CADDY

Perfect for teens that enjoy spending time in the great outdoors, caddying can be a great choice of summer job. This job does require an understanding of the game and some physical endurance, as there is a lot of walking involved as well as carrying a weighty bag of golf clubs. However, the pay certainly isn't bad considering that you can expect to earn anywhere between $50 and $100 for about four hours of work. Many of the more generous golfers may also reward their caddies with a tip.

RETAIL SALES

Perhaps one of the more diverse job options for teens, retail sales offers a great deal of opportunity for teens that are looking for work. This type of work can pay anywhere in the range of $11 to $13 an hour depending upon the duties involved. Inventory, stocking shelves, product demonstrations, handing out samples in grocery stores, customer service or operating a cash register are all options when it comes to retail sales. This type of work can be great for teens that are particularly sociable, as they will often have to interact with the public in addition to working as a part of a team.

FOOD SERVICE

Here's an opportunity to develop social skills while earning an income. A job in the food service industry is a natural fit for sociable teens that enjoy interacting with the public. This job allows employees to work as a part of a team while learning about following instructions and conflict resolution. This job also comes with an opportunity for high earnings since food service jobs usually come with an hourly wage of about $9 or $10 per hour. Many restaurants also allow their staff to earn tips. Keep in mind that food service jobs are not only limited to wait staff either. There are also jobs available as hosts or hostesses, busboys or busgirls, and cooks. Regardless of the position, the team needs to function properly in order to keep the business moving, so teens will learn valuable life skills in this type of job.

LIFE GUARD

A great choice for teens who are strong swimmers, life guarding can be a challenging position that comes with a fair share of responsibility. Completion of certification courses is required to be a life guard and is typically limited to those who are over the age of 15, so a bit of pre-planning will definitely be required if this type of job appeals. This job requires a high level of maturity and professionalism, but it is a rewarding job that can help teens to develop their decision-making skills and confidence while earning somewhere between $8 and $10 dollars per hour.

NANNY

Teens with a nurturing spirit who enjoy children could consider taking on a summer job as a nanny or babysitter, a position which is in high demand during the summer months when working parents need to secure childcare for their young children. This job requires someone who is highly responsible and can resolve conflicts. Though this job pays reasonably well, generally in the range of $8 to $15 dollars hourly, it can also require a great deal of patience. This is a great choice for teens who wish to pursue a career in teaching, child care, social work or any other field that makes use of social skills or requires interaction with kids.

HOUSEKEEPING

Though teenagers may be often viewed as having a difficult time keeping their bedrooms clean, there are some teens that do well in the housekeeping field. This type of work can bring in up to $10 an hour and will allow teens to learn responsibility and develop their organizational skills. This job is also in demand in a variety of industries and settings. The summer sees an upswing in the tourism industry, so hotels are often looking for dependable housekeeping staff, and malls and parks often need people to assist with keeping public areas clean and organized as well.

LANDSCAPING

Whether you join a landscaping business, or set out to offer your landscaping or lawn care services yourself, this seasonal job is a great choice for teens who love to spend time outdoors. Since many people don't have time to care for their lawns, this job is often in high-demand through the summer months. Teens who aren't afraid to get dirty can cash in on this demand and they'll also be getting some physical activity while lining their wallets with cold, hard cash.

TUTORING

Teens that are particularly bookish or aspire to work as a teacher might enjoy spending their summer months tutoring. Kids that are in summer school often need the extra help, and this presents a real opportunity for teens that are particularly talented in certain subject areas. Tutors that are proficient with computers could also teach adults computer skills. Teens that opt to take on a job as a tutor can earn anywhere from $8-15 an hour when they first start out, though this rate can increase depending upon their skills and experience.

THE BOTTOM LINE

Finding the perfect summer job will require planning. You should examine the opportunities that are readily available to you, and you must also consider what you hope to get out of the position. Working as a landscaper isn't much fun if you hate getting dirty, while being a nanny won't bring much joy if you don't like kids. Keep in mind that many summer jobs provide workers with transferable skills that come in handy later on in your career, so there are plenty of reasons why it's a wise idea to start building up your resume while you're still in school – and earning a little extra spending cash never hurt anyone either.

Northwest Indiana is home to over 30 adult education and learning sites

Many area adult education programs can help you:

Adult Basic Education (ABE)

English as a Second Language (ESL)
