What would I be doing? Agribusiness occupations involve all those who work with tending plant life, from growing food at a farm or garden to designing, implementing, and maintaining beautiful landscapes at public and private facilities.

How much money could I be earning? Agribusiness occupations range from entry-level positions where you'll learn your skills up to supervisory positions that can earn as much as $30 an hour. Those that invest in further education can become scientists earning $45 an hour.

Where would I be working? Agribusiness occupations work on farms, in nurseries, and anywhere else that people have grounds or lawns that need care.

Is this a growing field? This field is expected to shrink slightly in Northwest Indiana through 2022, but employs thousands already in these occupations. Statewide growth will be 3.5%, which is ahead of expected national growth.

What skills should I have? To work in this field, it's key that you enjoy nurturing plant life and like working outside. Tasks will frequently be labor-intensive and you may often work alone or in small teams. Being able to follow and give directions so inventory and grounds receive consistent care or maintenance is also important.

What education or training do I need? To get started, many of these occupations require only on-the-job training. But without either experience or further education, it's hard to get ahead. WorkOne can help with training and scholarships so you can achieve your goal.
