FREE EDUCATION MONEY!

EVERYONE should apply for FAFSA. It makes smart sense!

The office of Federal Student Aid at the U.S. Department of Education is the largest provider of student financial aid in the nation. They provide grants, loans, and work-study funds for college or career school, offering more than $150 billion each year to help millions of students for higher education.

They ensure students and their families can benefit from programs such as the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA®) which they developed. They process approximately 22 million FAFSA submissions each year.

Completing the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA®) is the first step toward getting federal aid for college, career school, or graduate school.

Many states and colleges use your FAFSA data to determine your eligibility for state and school aid, and some private financial aid providers may use your FAFSA information to determine whether you qualify for their aid.

ANSWERS TO 3 IMPORTANT QUESTIONS ABOUT FAFSA

WHY SHOULD I FILL OUT THE FAFSA?

If you don't fill out the FAFSA, you could be missing out on a lot of financial aid! We've heard a number of reasons students think they shouldn't complete the FAFSA. Here are a few:

- "I (or my parents) make too much money, so I won't qualify for aid."
- "Only students with good grades get financial aid."
- "The FAFSA is too hard to fill out."
- "I'm too old to qualify for financial aid."

If you think any of these statements apply to you, you may be very wrong. The reality is, EVERYONE should fill out the FAFSA!

WHEN DO I FILL OUT THE FAFSA?

The FAFSA becomes available in early January each year, and there are different deadlines for different programs.

You have to fill out the FAFSA every year you're in school in order to stay eligible for federal student aid.

Go to www.fafsa.gov, fill out the application, regardless of your age, grades or income level.

For more information about federal student aid, see StudentAid.gov or contact the Federal Student Aid Information Center:

DEADLINE INFORMATION

For the 2014–15 year, you can apply between Jan. 1, 2014, and June 30, 2015. However, there are a few first come, first served federal student aid programs, so be sure to apply as soon as you can.

You can find state deadlines at www.fafsa.gov

Check the school's website or contact its financial aid office. School deadlines are usually early in the year (often in February or March).

Some programs other than government or school aid require that you file the FAFSA. For instance, you can't get certain private scholarships unless you're eligible for a Federal Pell Grant—and you can't find out whether you're eligible for a Pell Grant unless you file a FAFSA. If the private scholarship's application deadline is in early to mid-January, you'll need to submit your FAFSA before that deadline.

“Trade”-ing Up: Coming Clean about Dirty Jobs

Today's youth have been told over and over again that going to college will get them a good job, that they need a bachelor's degree to have any hope of success in the workforce of the 21st century, and that a high school diploma isn't enough anymore. But it's increasingly looking like only the last of those statements is as true as it sounds.

As an article from the Columbian reports, while millions of unemployed college graduates have moved home and are struggling to make student loan payments, millions of good-paying or even high-paying jobs that don't require four years of college are going unfilled for want of workers with the right skills.

Talking with the Des Moines Register in June, Mike Rowe, former host of the TV show “Dirty Jobs,” brought up the question of why people don't seem to want to pursue vocational careers. Low pay? Bad work environment? No, neither of those are the main cause, according to Rowe. Instead, people are steering clear of skilled trades because of a perceived social stigma: “It's because for the last 40 to 50 years, we've done a really good job of marginalizing those jobs.”

While the old standby statistic still stands true that those who invest in a college education are likely to earn more than their peers over a lifetime, that doesn't necessarily mean that those willing to work hard in a skilled trade are that much worse off; telecommunications installers, for example, earn an average of $55,000 a year, which the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reports is the same average earning as those with a bachelor's degree can expect. So maybe we should consider that while greater education leads to greater outcomes, “greater education” doesn't necessarily mean college, it means developing real skills.

Speaking in terms of trades over college, Rowe went on to explain that, “the trick is not to say that ‘this path is better than this path.’ The trick is to make sure by the time the kid gets to this point, where he or she is seriously trying to figure out the best path, that they can look at the most options.”

Emphasizing the importance of making an informed decision is a sensible perspective, especially in light of the fact that, using U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics data, the Center for College Affordability and Productivity reported in 2010 that 35% of the 29 million college graduates in the workforce then had jobs that required less than a college degree. That means a lot of people with a lot of debt when they could have started off in the black from the beginning.

In Northwest Indiana, millwrights have a median hourly wage of $25.25 an hour, plumbers and carpenters have a median hourly rate of $25.63 an hour, and an electrician's median wage is $29 an hour. Certifications and apprenticeship programs, often low-cost and scholarship-supported, make these worthy careers attainable in a fraction of the time and at a fraction of the cost of a university education.

Finally, although some people still associate trade jobs with sweaty manufacturing plants or grime-covered overalls, the tools and work environments have come a long way and nowadays pride themselves on their safety records and state-of-the-art equipment and technology.

So while a college degree is often a good option, keep in mind that it's not the only option. From the workplace to the pay check, it's those in the skilled trades that are cleaning up. ■

WorkOne Success Story

Nicoll's story

FROM PAPER ROUTE TO CNA

Twenty-year-old Nicoll Sigman had taken on a paper route to bring in extra money for herself and her husband. She said she'd been thinking about trying to get training to be a Certified Nursing Assistant (C.N.A.) for a long time and "I finally decided not to think about it anymore and just do it –

take action," said Sigman. She heard about WorkOne from a friend and decided to see if they can provide help with the cost of tuition. Sigman qualified for fully funded tuition assistance. After enrolling in WorkOne and working with a career advisor for about two weeks, Sigman completed the necessary paperwork to receive approval for funding and one week later she was starting C.N.A. classes.

Sigman said although she'd been out of school for a few years, the four weeks of C.N.A. classes weren't hard and she had a really great instructor. She did say, however, that after the classes she was so nervous about taking the final state examination that she broke out in a rash. "It wasn't hard. I was just so nervous," she said laughing.

Sigman worked with her career advisor to create a great resume and got a job at the Rensselaer Care Center, the same day that she took her state exam!

The future is looking bright for Sigman. After working one year as a C.N.A., she will be able to apply for her Q.M.A. license and that's exactly what she plans on doing. Best of all, said Sigman, "I can sleep in a little, because I don't have to do the paper route anymore. ■
